

My Classroom Management Philosophy

My classroom management is creating a diversified classroom experience to provide a consistent, engaging and relationship-oriented encounter to my students. I will primarily provide a consistent daily classroom experience through set procedures beginning on day one. Within the daily schedule, I wish to include collaboration through games, debates, and discussions to engage students and bring about team-building skills. Additionally, I wish to cultivate relationships by using real-life examples connected to course content and allow students to creatively exercise freedom in developing projects. Ultimately, these strategies involve Wong, Marzano and Love & Logic, yet other classroom management techniques may be involved as well.
